

How well did reported rent and earnings reflect tenants' ability to pay?

Accrual accounting records rent when it is earned, not when it is paid, so revenue ahead of cash can be normal. The case question is whether MPW's tenants could pay what it recognized, and whether lending to those same tenants made its earnings look stronger than its economics.

On Jan 26, 2023, short-seller Viceroy Research alleged that MPW was lending tenants the money to pay its rent.

Medical Properties Trust (MPW)

393 properties

52 tenants, as of Feb 28, 2025

Hospitals: 173 acute-care hospitals · 69 behavioral · 130 post-acute · 21 freestanding ER/urgent care

Largest tenants, FY2024 revenue: Circle 20.7% · Priory 10.2%

Also lends to and invests in its operators. Steward, its largest tenant before bankruptcy, was 24.2% of total assets at FY2022 year-end.

Omega Healthcare Investors (OHI)

1,026 facilities

87 operators

Mostly nursing homes: 588 skilled nursing · 290 assisted living · 19 independent living · 18 specialty · 1 medical office building (+ mortgages on 97)

Largest operator: CommuniCare 11.8% of FY2024 revenue

Leases and mortgage loans to many operators; loans are a larger share of its assets than at SBRA.

Sabra Health Care REIT (SBRA)

364 properties

14 loans · 5 preferred equity investments

skilled nursing, senior housing (leased + managed), behavioral health

Largest tenant: no tenant ≥10% of revenue in any year

Landlord and, through managers, operator of senior housing: it books residents’ fees as revenue.

FY2024 revenue mix

Only MPW reports straight-line rent as its own revenue line. OHI’s sits inside rental income ($43M of non-cash straight-line rent and effective interest in FY2024, per its cash flow statement); SBRA’s sits inside rental revenue.

40.5% of SBRA’s FY2024 revenue is resident fees from senior housing it operates, with operating costs to match, so its revenue is not all rent. We use total revenue as the case asks and flag the difference wherever a ratio depends on it.

MPW: few, large hospital operators, also financed by MPW. OHI: many nursing-home operators. SBRA: diversified, part landlord, part operator.

OHI performed best: profitable every year, with cash flow above earnings.

Return on equity (ROE) = net income ÷ average total equity

	FY2022	FY2023	FY2024
MPW	10.6% ROE Net income$904M CFO$739M	−6.9% ROE Net income−$556M CFO$506M	−38.6% ROE Net income−$2.41B CFO$245M
OHI	11.1% ROE Net income$439M CFO$626M	6.6% ROE Net income$249M CFO$618M	9.8% ROE Net income$418M CFO$749M
SBRA	−2.4% ROE Net income−$78M CFO$316M	0.5% ROE Net income$14M CFO$301M	4.6% ROE Net income$127M CFO$311M

OHI: ROE 11.1% → 6.6% → 9.8%, CFO above net income every year. FY2022 earnings include a $360.0M gain on assets sold, so not all of it is rent.

MPW: ROE 10.6% → −6.9% → −38.6% as Steward unwinds; CFO falls every year ($812M → $245M).

SBRA: losses in FY2021–22 come mostly from joint-venture impairments; profitable since FY2023. Lowest leverage of the three, though debt ÷ assets rose (43.6% → 44.8% → 45.6%).

OHI > SBRA > MPW

Consolidated net income and total equity, both including noncontrolling interests; average of opening and closing equity. SBRA’s revenue includes resident fees. The full margin × turnover × leverage breakdown is in the appendix.

In FY2022, MPW's net income beat its cash flow, mostly because of a property-sale gain.

Total accruals = net income – cash flow from operations (CFO). For a landlord they are normally negative: depreciation lowers net income but uses no cash. Large negatives can also mean impairments and reserves, so they are not a sign of strength.

Total accruals (net income – CFO) · MPW FY2022: +$164.8M, because net income included a $536.8M gain on property sales. A sale gain raises net income but brings in no operating cash: the CFO reconciliation deducts it, and the $2.19B of sale proceeds is investing cash flow.

* Analytical, not GAAP: accruals as if the gain were excluded.

MPW: net income vs. CFO, FY2021–23

In FY2022, net income rose 37.6% while CFO fell 9.0%.

HOW NET INCOME BECOMES CFO · MPW FY2022

- Gain on property sales $536.8M: deducted
- “Straight-line rent revenue and other” $282.5M: non-cash revenue, deducted
- Impairments $268.4M: non-cash expense, added back

Off-pattern years: MPW FY2022 (positive, sale gain). MPW FY2023–24 and SBRA FY2021–22 (large negatives from reserves, write-offs and impairments). SBRA’s CFO held at $356M → $316M; MPW’s cash fell too.

WHAT CFO CANNOT SHOW

Making and collecting loans are investing activities (Class 7). If a tenant pays rent with money its landlord lent it, the rent lands in CFO and the loan in investing, so CFO alone cannot show self-financed rent.

Illustrative sensitivity, not GAAP CFO: CFO less all loans advanced was $753M → $532M → $256M (reported $812M → $739M → $506M). Loans went to all borrowers, and not every advance funded rent.

Before Steward failed, MPW’s filings showed concentrated tenant credit risk.

How each recognized that tenants would not pay

MPW's earnings looked stronger than its cash and tenant credit justified.

We agree with the substance of Viceroy’s critique. MPW’s reported earnings presented a stronger picture than its recurring cash generation and tenant credit exposure justified. The evidence supports concern about economic performance; it does not establish fabricated rent or a GAAP violation.

SIGNAL 1 · STRAIGHT-LINE RECEIVABLE ÷ REVENUE

Much of the rent was not yet cash.

MPW 47–73% vs OHI 14–21%: more of MPW’s recognized rent depended on tenants paying for years to come.

Limit: an accumulated balance, not overdue rent; lease terms differ.

SIGNAL 2 · LARGEST TENANT ÷ REVENUE

One fragile tenant, financed by MPW.

Steward was more than 10% of revenue and 19–25% of assets, and MPW lent it a further $150M in 2022. OHI’s largest operator was near 10%; SBRA had none that large.

Limit: MPW gave only a threshold, not the exact revenue share.

STRONGEST FACT AGAINST US

A Wachtell Lipton review, engaged by the Audit Committee of MPW’s board, found no evidence of round-tripping or fraudulent revenue recognition.

MPW moved Steward to cash basis on Dec 31, 2023, after the first shortfall (Sep 2023) and before the bankruptcy.

The positive FY2022 accrual came from a sale gain, not from rent.

This rules out the fraud version of the critique, not the credit risk. Our signals concern whether tenants could pay, not whether revenue was invented, so our position stands in narrower form.

Supporting, not independent: in FY2022 net income rose 37.6% while CFO fell, mostly a sale gain. In FY2023, $82M of revenue arrived as Prospect securities “in lieu of cash.”

Helpful

Pulled statement lines and footnotes from 12 10-Ks and the SEC’s XBRL data

Searched filings for “cash basis,” “straight-line” and tenant concentration

Kept every figure in one data file; a script checks each number on these slides against it

Bottlenecks

SEC blocks automated requests that lack a contact User-Agent

XBRL lacks the key footnotes (allowance by instrument, tenant concentration): back to the filings

Definitions change: OHI’s tenant share excluded write-offs through FY2023, included them in FY2024

Learned

A first pass mixed scopes (common-shareholder income over total equity) and exposures (one allowance over two asset types); review caught both

Every ratio needed a human definition decision

Absence of disclosure is itself a data point

SBRA net margin and asset turnover use total revenue, as the case asks. On comparable (rental + interest) revenue*, net margin is –17.7% → 3.3% → 30.3% and asset turnover 0.075× → 0.074× → 0.078× (FY2022–24). * Excludes resident fees and services, so the net income in the numerator still includes senior-housing operations that the revenue in the denominator leaves out.
